

About the Workshop

This is a two-day intensive certification training teaching the AutPlay Therapy treatment approach, a play therapy and behavioral therapy approach to working with children and adolescents with autism spectrum disorder, neurodevelopmental disorders, and other developmental disabilities. An overview of autism and other neurodevelopmental disorders will be presented. AutPlay Therapy will be presented including the six target treatment areas of AutPlay and the three phases of treatment. Parent/family training, and research will be highlighted. Intake and assessment protocols will be presented with case examples. AutPlay foundations of play therapy and behavioral therapy will be covered and several directive play therapy interventions will be demonstrated. You will also participate in experiential case conceptualization and treatment planning. The size of this training group will not be limited in number. Once you have registered for the training, you will be emailed a pre-training form with a few instructions before your two-day in-person training. This includes instructions for purchasing and reading the AutPlay book prior to your training.

You will have the opportunity to:

1. Gain a brief overview of autism and other neurodevelopmental disorders.
2. Learn the components of AutPlay Therapy including: phases of treatment, assessment and screening, and treatment planning.
3. Describe the three primary and three secondary target areas of treatment in AutPlay Therapy.
4. Learn several structured play therapy interventions to use for addressing target areas.
5. Understand how to involve parents and other family members in treatment.
6. Describe the AutPlay model of dysregulation and learn play therapy interventions to address dysregulation issues.
7. Learn about research and evidence based practices in AutPlay Therapy.
